Dear Parents:

Let your ambition as a parent be to raise children who are loved and able to give love. Today, ask yourself what can you change to help meet the challenge of parenting? What are some reasonable restrictions for your children? What should your children be free to do?

Your children need to trust - not fear you. If you want your children to become responsible adults, you must teach them how to be responsible children. Offering options is a good way to help your children be more responsible.

A misguided child is a mistreated child.
